Blocking a world leader from Twitter or removing their controversial Tweets would hide important information people should be able to see and debate. It would also not silence that leader, but it would certainly hamper necessary discussion around their words and actions.

Feel like it's harder to hear the signal from the noise?

Our need for media and information literacy skills is more acute as we consume content from an increasingly wide range of sources.

Who produced it? Where did it come from? Is it factually accurate?

We're also taking new enforcement measures

- Reducing visibility of suspicious accounts in Tweet & account metrics
- Improving our signup process
- Auditing existing accounts for signs of automated signup
- Automating more processes where we see suspicious account activity

This work includes partnering with the govt., civil society and peer companies to better identify, understand and mitigate threats to the public conversation.

Through these partnerships , we're creating a culture of proactive work to better serve these democratic processes.

While we did see some malicious activity, it was nothing out of the ordinary—we took action at speed & scale. It was generally sharing of low volume & low reach voter suppressive content. Importantly—based on our initial review—the vast majority appeared to be of domestic origin.

Here's how our new Ads Transparency Center works:

Ad Transparency

Ad Transparency

Ad Transparency is a new feature that allows advertisers to see and manage their ad data in a more transparent way. It provides a clear view of the ads that are running on Twitter, including the amount spent, the number of impressions, and the number of clicks. This information is available for all ads that are running on Twitter, regardless of whether they are targeted or not. Advertisers can also use this information to optimize their campaigns and to ensure that they are getting the most out of their advertising budget.

Twitter Ads policies

Twitter's advertising policies are designed to ensure that all ads are safe, legal, and respectful. We have a variety of policies in place to protect our users and our platform, and we work hard to enforce these policies. If you have any questions about our advertising policies, please contact our support team.

Today, we lose strong #NetNeutrality rules. Although the changes may not be felt by most in the immediate, this will have real consequences for businesses, innovators, and the Internet as we know it. We look forward to working with lawmakers and regulators on a solution.

Last October, Twitter announced plans to launch a new industry-leading platform called the Ads Transparency Center (ATC). The ATC will go beyond the requirements of the Honest Ads Act and eventually provide increased transparency to all advertisements on Twitter.

Moreover, the ATC will dramatically increase transparency for political and issue ads, providing people with significant detail on the origin of each ad. We have a dedicated team that is fully resourced to implementing the ATC and are committed to launching it this summer.

Twitter is moving forward on our commitment to providing transparency for online ads. We believe the Honest Ads Act provides an appropriate framework for such ads and look forward to working with bill sponsors and others to continue to refine and advance this important proposal.

Twitter is here to serve and help advance the global, public conversation. Elected world leaders play a critical role in that conversation because of their outsized impact on our society.

35 28 61

Twitter Public Policy @Policy · 5 Jan 2018

Blocking a world leader from Twitter or removing their controversial Tweets would hide important information people should be able to see and debate. It would also not silence that leader, but it would certainly hamper necessary discussion around their words and actions.

Twitter Public Policy @Policy · 5 Jan 2018

We review Tweets by leaders within the political context that defines them, and enforce our rules accordingly. No one person's account drives Twitter's growth, or influences these decisions. We work hard to remain unbiased with the public interest in mind.

WaPo: Top business leaders, 27 governors, urge Congress to boost computer science education washingtonpost.com/local/education

The Washington Post

Business leaders say democratizing access to computer science will give students a leg up in the burgeoning tech fields but also in almost any job.

“Computer science is not just about becoming an engineer, but teaching people how to think in a different way, in a critical way,” said Jack Dorsey, co-founder and chief executive of Twitter. “That can be helpful in any field,”

The volume of conversation about COVID-19 is tremendous, which means it requires expertise and computational resources to process.

Devs ops and researchers with that capability and intent to support the public good can apply for access.

It's more important than ever that those who wish to vote have the option to do so on or before Election Day. @Twitter supports @VoteEarlyDay along with dozens of other businesses to ensure everyone knows their voting options ahead of the 2020 US elections. 🇺🇸

Vote Early Day @voteearlyday

As COVID-19 continues, we must ensure voters are able to cast a ballot this fall. Check out the @voteearlyday ad in the @wsj, calling on business and community leaders to support voting early.

On the first anniversary of the #ChristchurchCall we've come together with our GIFCT partners @Amazon, @Facebook, @Google, and @Microsoft to reflect on the progress we've made and the work ahead. Full statement:

"One year ago we committed to the Christchurch Call to Action in response to the March 15, 2019 attack in Christchurch, New Zealand. Since then, our companies have continued our shared work to prevent terrorists and violent extremists from abusing digital platforms. Through the Global Internet Forum to Counter Terrorism, we created a protocol to jointly combat the spread of terrorist content following an attack, established a growing advisory committee of government and international organizations to help inform our work, launched working groups to take new proactive steps to address terrorist and violent extremist content online, and continued to support academic research on how terrorists use digital platforms. This work is only the beginning, and we are committed to making meaningful progress in the years to come working closely with governments, international organizations, and the multiple stakeholders who support the Christchurch Call."

Going back a few years, there's been a lot of discussion about "bots" online. Over time, however, it's become a loaded and often misunderstood term.

 Twitter shouldnt be in the business of stifling free speech. The very idea of free speech is to allow speech you'd disagree with. Twitter forgot what free speech means.

Twitter shouldn't be in the business of stifling free speech. The very idea of free speech is to allow speech you'd disagree with. Twitter forgot what free speech means.

Twitter should not be in the business of stifling free speech. The very idea of free speech is to allow speech you'd disagree with. Twitter forgot what free speech means.

This EO is a reactionary and politicized approach to a landmark law. #Section230 protects American innovation and freedom of expression, and it's underpinned by democratic values. Attempts to unilaterally erode it threaten the future of online speech and Internet freedoms.

Today, in partnership with @ndvh, we're launching this search prompt in the US — in both English and Spanish — to help victims of domestic and gender-based violence get the assistance they need. 🇺🇸

You are not alone

If you or someone you know is affected by domestic or gender based violence and needs support, you are not alone. Our partner the National Domestic Violence

Hotline can help.

How does this undermines our diversity? We have Americans from all races and backgrounds that could be hired. Why don't you mention other countries around the world that wouldn't even allow you to live temporarily there just because the color of your skin USA is pretty good

Immigrants are a vital part of our communities, our economy, and our national fabric. We immigrants are also canaries in the constitutional coal mine of a democracy in crisis. No one has more at stake in the fight to stop fascism <https://twitter.com/ShahidForChange/status/125263870279523073>

Want to stop fascism in Washington? I'm an immigrant Muslim lawyer & artist with a 20-year history defending human rights principles in the courts, in the streets, and in policies enacted from coast to coast. No one has more skin in the game, or more relevant experience. <https://twitter.com/ShahidForChange/status/1252448763957805058>

We applaud the passage of the broadband provisions included in the INVEST in America Act that just cleared the US House. It's more important than ever that we invest in affordable and accessible Internet service for all and make progress on bridging the digital divide.

Today, in partnership with @ndvh, we're launching this search prompt in the US -- in both English and Spanish -- to help victims of domestic and gender-based violence get the assistance they need. ❤️

You are not alone

If you or someone you know is affected by domestic or gender-based violence and needs support, you are not alone. Our partner, the National Domestic Violence Hotline, can help.

Legislative frameworks should consider impacts to competition and innovation.

E.g. GDPR has had positive effects on consumer privacy but a @TilburgU study found it had adverse effects on competition by strengthening large companies.

In order to protect open, civic-minded societies, we need a dynamic, sophisticated and nuanced approach to content moderation.

This nuanced approach guides our work on a number of issues and practices.

When it comes to conversations with government and state-affiliated media accounts on Twitter, we're helping to make the experience more transparent.

We'll now use two distinct profile labels for these types of accounts, so you can easily identify them and their Tweets. (1/2)

Twitter signed onto this Amicus Brief. These visas attract global talent to the US over everywhere else. They enjoy broad, bipartisan support.

Halting them generates unnecessary uncertainty, particularly at this time. Our innovation, competition, and recovery are under threat.

Today we joined industry peers and US government partners as we work to counter shared threats to the online public conversation ahead of the 2020 US Elections. Our joint statement.

"For the past several years, we have worked closely to counter information operations across our platforms. In preparation for the upcoming election, we regularly meet to discuss trends with US government agencies tasked with protecting the integrity of the election. We held the latest in a series of meetings with government partners today where we each provided updates on what we're seeing on our respective platforms and what we expect to see in the coming months. Specifically, we discussed preparations for the upcoming conventions and scenario planning related to election results. We will continue to stay vigilant on these issues and meet regularly ahead of the November election."

Protecting the #OpenInternet requires transparency and a place for the public to hold governments to account for how they engage with online services.

We're launching a reimagined Transparency Center to offer more granular data and insights on this work.

Fragmented rules — reinforced by inconsistent regulations aimed at tackling online content — create challenges. As content grows, these rules are unsustainable and risk setting regulatory barriers that only a handful of large companies have the resources to meet.

Focusing on content alone, and driving platforms to adopt the same standards, will stifle competition and undermine free expression. The question of how people find content and how it is amplified is more important than what content exists.

Thank you members of the Commerce Committee for the opportunity to speak with the American people about Twitter and §230. My remarks will be brief to get to questions. §230 is the most important law protecting Internet speech. Removing §230 will remove speech from the Internet.

We're further expanding how we label Tweets that may contain misleading information around #COVID19 vaccines.

We're also implementing an enforcement framework that's intended to curb repeated violations of our rules around this critical public health issue.
